CIA Assailed By Sparkman On Cuba Fiasco

By the Associated Press

Washington

Sen. John J. Sparkman (D) of Alabama, has called for a "full disclosure" of the Central Intelligence Agency's activities in the unsuccessful 1961 Cuban invasion.

Senator Sparkman, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said former CIA director Allen W. Dulles provided "bad intelligence" in the operation.

Denying that any United States air cover was planned, the Alabama Senator said in a taped television program that the invasion was scheduled as a guerrilla action. He said participants were supposed to seize the beaches, work inland, and the Cubans would rise up and support them.
